AN ADDRESS ON RIGHTEOUSNESS

Owing to Sickness Mr. Apgar Was Not at Men's Meeting and Rev. Johnston Addressed the Audience.

Owing to an attack of grip which confined him to the house, W. Holt Apgar, Esq., of Trenton, was unable to keep his engagement to address the Men's Meeting at the Bristol Baptist Church on last Sunday afternoon. Rev. Johnston, with practically no preparation, delivered a splendid address on "Righteousness," his remarks being based upon the episode of Apostle Paul's appearance before King Felix.

Mr. Johnston spoke as follows:

REV. JOHNSTON'S ADDRESS.

On last Sunday afternoon I am sure we were all mightily impressed with the address on the great drama of life, and evidently as each man of us listened to it we felt the force and truth presented in it, and a desire to play the part that was assigned to us and play it well; that when the curtain was rung down on our life, we would not be compelled to say as we viewed the part, that we played the part of the fool.

We are made conscious as we study history, that there are some mountain peaks in human character, who, because of the place they occupy in the world today, wield such almighty influence that the succeeding generations will look to them as models, but we must remember, as well, the fact that each one of us is a force in the world and in the place where we live, that our influence is going to multiply for good or for bad as the years roll on.

I wish it were in my power this afternoon to be a painter. I wish I might paint for you a picture which was presented to me by a text of scripture in the Acts of the Apostles, 24th chapter and 24th verse: And after certain days, when Felix came with his wife, Drusilla, who was a Jewess, he sent for Paul, and heard him concerning the faith in Christ. And as he reasoned of righteousness, temperance and judgment to come, Felix trembled, and answered, "Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season, I will call for thee."

There is no character outside of the Son of God that has wielded such a mighty influence as the Apostle Paul. No writer of books will ever be an influence unless there is something of character back of his writing. The picture is one of intense interest. Felix, the ruler, and by his side Drusilla, who was the wife of another man, but Felix was passionately fond of her. These two people, though they were living in sin, time dragged heavily on their hands, and they discovered the fact that there was a noted prisoner, so they sent for him that he might entertain them with the story of his faith in Christ. You can see the soldiers as they do his bidding; you can see the form of the Apostle Paul as he is bound in chains and brought into the presence of the ruler. There is a sneer on the face of the ruler and his companion in sin. They give Paul every opportunity to express himself. It takes a wonderful man to be able to say what he ought to say in the presence of those who have power over him. The natural temptation for men in the world in which we live is to say a great many things behind peoples' backs that they would no doubt be afraid to say in front of them. We have known of men to say a thing about one who occupies some place in the world; we have heard them condemned by the man and just as soon as they put in an appearance, clap goes the trap and there is nothing doing. We bow in subjection to a man who has a character we have no faith in whatever, but just merely because he occupies a prominent place in the world, you and I are fearful what we say might get us into trouble. We say it under our breath. It is all true, I know it, but I just don't want to speak out.

If there ever was a man brought face to face with a cool proposition it was the Apostle Paul in the presence of Felix that he might talk concerning his faith in Christ. If there ever was a chance for a man to win over a friend who might be of service in the critical time of his life, here was the opportunity to do so. His enemies and accusers were not present. The ruler is in a good humor, he wants to be entertained and if Paul was only shrewd enough to grasp the opportunity, he may flatter the ruler; he may tell him how great and grand and noble and true he is; he might then get around the argument and tell him how he himself had been falsely accused and how his enemies had taken advantage of him and plead his own cause in the presence of the ruler without any one to oppose. Here has his opportunity to make himself good.

The Apostle Paul rises above either of these situations; he recognizes there is a something beyond mere affairs of his own cause and so he began to reason with the ruler. He did not preach upon the love of God; he did not take for his text "God so loved the world, that he gave His only begotten son, that all who believe on him should not perish, but have everlasting life;" he did not do that. There are times when that text is very appropriate, but the fact of the matter is, that men have heard so much of love that they are love sick. There are thousands of men and women today who are unwilling to recognize the fact that while God is a God of love, He is also a God of justice; so the apostle began to reason upon righteousness, righteousness.

The kingdom of God is not meat and drink, but righteousness. Men have been persuaded to separate the church from the common life of the people. I stand here in the presence of a number of men with all of us on the journey toward the grave, and from the beginning of this blessed old Book to the last verse thereof, until the Amen is said, I find nowhere any other thing announced to the world concerning the kingdom of God. Righteousness is the fundamental rock of the whole theme. If you and I are thinking about confirmation, baptism, church membership and all that sort of thing, independent of that great proof, you and I are going to fail utterly. A man who enters the door of the church of Christ to robe himself in the garments of that church where he appears to others to stand for righteousness, when he knows his life is black and wrong, has not begun to know the principles of that blessed old Book. Righteousness means right living. We do not preach this gospel to men on Sunday, we sometimes so advertise a religion, which is a traversity on the religion of the Lord Jesus. Some men are willing to clothe themselves with it, and with sanctimonious faces parade up and down and sometimes even handle the cup at the communion table, and down deep in their hearts and in their intercourse with men in the world of business around about them, is all but righteousness. They are ofttimes moral lepers; and so Felix now was stirred to the innermost depths as he gazed upon the sin in his heart; but by his side sat that beautiful woman, who is the wife of another man. So Paul did not seek any other thought than that of right living. I do not mean as merely in the lusts of the flesh, that is part of it, but righteousness is not only right living in the social realm, but living right relations with our fellowmen. I want to say that which I am sure appealed to you in the course of the meetings that are coming to a close, that we need to show more proper relations which we bear to one another in the great struggle for bread, which is becoming more and more intense. It may have been worse within some other time of the world's history, but never in the history of our lives have we seen conditions as they are in the present moment. There seems to be the need of a new gospel being preached. There seems to be the need of a new law being enacted, or the old laws we have now being enforced so that we shall recognize the fact that God never gave the right to any man to lord it over his fellows. God never intended that a man should amass a great fortune by the power of grinding the poor, taking their very blood to mingle in their glory and luxury; and we need to recognize the fact that God means right living and right relations, that the poor shall have his rights as well as the rich, and so as Paul preached on righteousness he meant not only social righteousness, but he meant as well the right relation which we bear one to another in the great conflict of liberty; and then beyond question the Apostle Paul had in mind as he preached righteousness to this ruler, and upon the right relations in the great government of which he was representative, his present position in the dungeon at Jerusalem was the result of the failure of the proper regulation in law. He was a free born Roman, and by the right of that birth he should have had a fair trial, instead of that he had to appeal to Ceaser.

The grafters are not all living in 1910. If you will read the Bible you will find Felix sent for him in the hope of getting a rake off. He sent for him a great many times, so grafting is really an old trade, only some of our fellows improved on the old ways, and get theirs in bunches now, as in Pittsburg, Albany, and some other places. I bless God for the Apostle Paul preaching righteousness, that means every man in public office shall recognize the principle of right living, right relations, right adjustments and the recognition of that supreme power.

We live under the power of the law which properly administered means for the good of all of us and the supporting of the nation. Paul did not only deal with one phase—not only righteousness but temperance. Temperance did not mean the closing of the saloon; that is not the thought of temperance referred to in the Bible, but self-control. If there is anything needed to be preached to all of us this afternoon, it is self-control. Oh! what a change in the lives of most of us if we could hear as we ought to hear, and recognize the power that it is possible for each of us to possess self-control. This old Book and history teaches this great truth, "He who controls his own spirit is mightier than he who taketh a city." That requirement possible to each one of us, the controlling of ourselves by ourselves, controlled by an agent in the nature of the Almighty, as well as a partner in civilization, to prove to men the possibility in control, not only of the passions in one direction, but in all directions, and then to preach upon judgment to come—don't forget it.

Men, there is a theme we need to remember, "Judgment to come." Sometimes when you and I get discouraged, when we seem to see the wrong triumph and the right crushed—you remember that quotation given the other day in our meeting about "Right forever on the scaffold and wrong forever on the throne"—but behind that scaffold in the dim unknown there is a righteous God who is going to rule. Bless your heart friends, isn't it worth while that in that day of judgment justice is going to be done. The criminal is not going to be let go merely because the fellow on his bond has a political pull. One boy isn't going to the penitentiary and another fellow get off when both have done the same thing, because of pull. In that great day of judgment justice is going to be done, and though you and I sometimes become disheartened and discouraged, God never told us by his book, or by any other process, that you and I shall see the full completion, the full blooming flower rounded out of all His plans and processes, but when you and I recognize the truth you will recognize there is a day of judgment coming. Some people get some of it here, but we will all get it hereafter. I know that some people say that you have your hell here—some people have some of it here, no question about that, but they made it themselves. God never wanted a man to go to hell. God never sends a man to hell. If he goes it is because he refuses to accept the means God has provided.

See that picture if you will, Paul with flashing eye, his hands bound by chains, proclaims that wonderful sermon of his, of righteousness, temperance and judgment and old Felix listens spellbound by the eloquence of the preacher. He begins to shake as his own conscience is stirred; the very seat upon which he sits begins to move. At last he cries out, "Paul, Paul, stop it, I have heard enough. Go thy way at some more convenient season I will take the matter up."

You hear the clank, clank of the chains as the apostle disappears to his cell. Felix has made his choice. God gives every man a choice. If any man here ever is lost, it is not because God did not give you a chance, but the fact of the matter is you wouldn't take the chance you had. There isn't a man in this audience this afternoon, but if you will stop and look back over your boyhood days but can recall the moments in life when you had the chance as far as the world is concerned for position. Many a man this afternoon remembers the time in life when he had the chance for some investment, that investment would have multiplied and might have made him a rich man; he had the chance but he would not take it. So with every one of us, we each one of us have the chance.

God gave Felix the chance when Paul preached unto him righteousness, temperance and judgment to come. I want to say to you as we come near the close of this series of meetings that there hasn't been any speaker within the walls of this church but that has had a message, it may be in different language.

There isn't a man of you (you may not have agreed with all that has been said) but what recognizes the fact that back of it all, and through it all, there has been one great foundation, truth. God desires man to reach his highest possible development mentally, spiritually and physically. For that one purpose did the Son of God die, that you might know it was possible by faith and ministry of the spirit, and by conviction in your own heart and conscience you know the truth as Felix knew the truth. Why didn't he yield to that truth? He shook with emotion, he was convicted. I want you to read this passage of scripture, and you will know that while Felix trembled, Drusilla didn't. She sat right alongside of him. Can you imagine while Paul was preaching upon righteousness and self-control this ruler's heart was stirred as he looks upon his sin, and he turns and glances upon the beautiful face of the woman who sat beside him—do you think as he thus gazed upon her face, he thought of what Paul said, and if he was to take his place by the side of Paul he must say to this beautiful woman with whom he was living in sin, "You must go back to your husband or somewhere, but get out of my life." It wasn't convenient to let her go; he wasn't ready yet to let her go. Many a man has been in the same position, but it isn't always the lust of woman damning a man's life; that isn't it always. There may be many men damned today by that very lust. When the appeal comes to the conscience, I know it is wrong; down in my heart I know it is wrong, but it is not convenient just now to let it go.

Here is the lust for drink. Across the sky, God has written the word, "A drunkard cannot inherit the kingdom of God." An appeal comes out from the word of God and says, "If you are going to enter into the kingdom of God you must live righteously. Day of judgment is coming." He says, I know it, Mr. Johnston, I know it is all true, but it isn't convenient just now to let go.

Here is the lust for gold; the lust for position; dishonesty in business, and he says I know I cannot live, Mr. Johnston, as I am now and become a Christian; the reason why I have not taken a stand is because I am such a coward, I know it, I won't be a hypocrite; but I cannot do the way I am doing in business and be a Christian, cannot do it, and have got to let go somewhere, but it isn't convenient just now.

Oh! friends, somehow or other the devil persuades us that it will be possible to crowd into our lives in the last five minutes what we have crowded out of those lives through all the time God has given us. Is it not strange, men, that we somehow or other believe that character is like a cloak. They tell us down in Mexico among the ignorant inhabitants of that country, when the shadow of death is in a home, they secure, if possible the outer cloak of the priest. They bring that outer cloak of the priest and lay it on the bed of the dying loved one, then those who are left behind, if they have had the good fortune and privilege to secure the robe of the priest, feel a sense of relief and of security. They are poor superstitious minds, and believe on account of the outer cloak of a man who professes to be a man of God that it is sufficient to bring them through the cloud, and let the soul of the departed one enter into the presence of the Most High.

Friends, the thing we carry with us is our character. Our character isn't built in a moment of time; our character is what we really are. The world may say some things about us, that is reputation; we leave that behind us with the outer cloak. No man can build character in a moment of time. I do not question the power of God to forgive men's sins; I do say to you today, to every one of us, as well as to Felix and Drusilla, there comes this one great appeal to righteousness, to temperance and to judgment to come. More and more, as I live among men; more and more as I try in my humble way to do something for the uplifting of mankind the less I have taken interest in the theological hair-splittings of our day and generation, nor do I have much confidence in the building of castles in the air of beautiful characters that will some day be revealed in men. I am intensely interested and influenced by the principle that come down into men's lives, clothed in the human flesh, walking up and down this world making the world better because we have lived in it. Men, there is nothing in all the world so important in any community as the righteous man; the men who live right in every relation. There is no devil so dark as that devil of lust that does as Felix does. There is no serpent whose sting is more venemous than the man who lives in the community who desires to gratify himself and preys upon his fellows, either as he creeps with his slimy tread into a home and takes to his bosom the loved ones and ruins them; the same principle applies in grasping after that which really belongs to his neighbor, and takes from them the chance to live the life as God would have them live in His good free air. Oh men, we will all condemn Felix, but some other men do the same thing in different form, that is all. So I say to you men this afternoon in this hurried talk of mine that what we need is not merely to preach, though much it may be needed, but we need to realize the fact that God expects in us and gave to us the power to be righteous men, to be temperate men, realizing the fact that some day judgment day is coming, justice will be done though you and I may try and fail in the world's measurement of us, but not in God's justice. I thank God that down deep in your heart and mine we may know there is a mind beyond the mind of men, and through all they may say to disturb our lives he knows the truth that is there, and though we may be thus as we move along through life blocked and hindered by the world, yet, like the Apostle Paul, we may come to the end of our journey as did he, hindered and handicapped and yet able to say, "I have fought a good fight," for it is going to be a fight if you are trying to be good. Don't imagine that it is foolish to try to do right. If you think it is an easy thing to try to be a Christian, make up your mind you are going to do it, for tomorrow, just for twenty-four hours, and see if you don't find it a hard proposition, but I am sure there is a reward in it. Don't forget it—it will be, "I have fought a good fight, I have kept the faith and henceforth there is laid up for me a crown in heaven," and though Nero's block and axe lay just beyond the city walls, he did not seem to see it, but looked beyond it and says, "There is now a crown of righteousness for me, and not for me only but for all those who love his appearing."

God help us to be righteous men, temperate men, and ever live in the knowledge of the fact that some day we must stand before the judge of all and render an account for what we have done, the way we have lived, and how we associated with our fellow men.

Tullytown.

Milton Stroup's house is undergoing the process of being painted by Robert Chase.

Mrs. John White, of Penn Valley, has been a guest of friends in Washington, D. C.

A gospel song service will be held in the Methodist Episcopal Church next Sunday evening at 7.45, under the direction of the pastor.

The Red Men's lodge of this place is still considering the advisability of building a public hall, and contractors may now have an opportunity to submit bids for the same. Theodore Burton is chairman of the committee.

Elmer Eastburn has moved into the house vacated by James McLean, a part of Harrold Roberts' property; Mr. McLean has removed to the tenant house on Marlin Ulrick's farm. Harry Carlen now occupies a portion of William J. Wright's house, from which William Obermeier removed to his own property. Warren Thompson, of Bristol, is occupying his Tullytown house for the season. Timothy Worthington, of Fallsington, has taken up residence at the Garretson house on Oxford street.

The Methodist parsonage was the scene of a very pleasant affair last Wednesday evening, when the congregation of the M. E. Church tendered to the Rev. O. J. Randall and his wife a reception in honor of their return to this church for the sixth year. After prayer by M. W. White, the address of welcome was given by Harry Lafferty, to which Mr. Randall responded. Appropriate remarks were made by others, and after singing "Blest be the Tie that Binds," and a closing prayer by the pastor, the remainder of the evening was spent in social intercourse and refreshments.

BUCKMAN'S BIG SURPRISE

Clarence Had Grundy's Promise for the Senate Last Fall.

WHERE IS CLYMER?

School Board Purchased Brock Property, Sewer Troubles and Water Works in a Mess.

Doylestown, April 6, 1910.

The county seat had a sure surprise when it read an article in Grundy's plaything, at the bottom of the first page, giving an account of Clarence J. Buckman's friends and neighbors assembling in unknown numbers, possibly too large to count, and urging him to take the nomination for the State Senate. Of course, Clarence was very much astonished at having this unexpected honor thrust on him and while he would much rather stay at home and help his brother watch for automobiles he, nevertheless, yielded to the urgent solicitation of his friends and for the good of the party sacrificed his personal inclinations and became a candidate.

Clarence had kept his intentions hidden away closely from the "vigilance committees of Middletown, Langhorne, Attleboro and Hulmeville," because, last fall at a good roads meeting at Jamison, Clarence made a speech and his aspirations to succeed Senator Grim seemed to be public property. Everybody that has any pretense to political wisdom at the county seat knew that Clarence claimed that he had Grundy's promise that he should be the nominee, but, nevertheless, the vigilance committees did a good big surprise stunt and the item was sent to the Newtown Enterprise only.

If Grundy engineered this spontaneous outburst by the vigilance committees why did not the Intelligencer have it. When the Intelligencer did print it they carefully credited the item to the Enterprise, a thing they rarely do.

And then closely following this came the uprising of Bristol's Fire Department and the consequent surprise of Frank Gilkeson whose unpreparedness was shown by the carefully prepared speech he delivered, and in all this, where, oh! where, is Isaac Clymer? No sound comes from the West Rockhill section. Is it possible that Farmer Clymer is to be turned down and another man selected in his place? Nothing has been heard from, of, or about him. Of course, the county seat approves of Grundy's choice, although it is rather in doubt about the situation. John Poore came down to secure a bridge contract this week, but the sphinx was a double-tongued gossip alongside of him. He had his hearty handshake and his genial smile with him, but when it came to politics he sure had nothing to say and there may be another shuffle of the cards before the primaries in June.

TROLLEYS TO THE MONUMENT HOUSE.

On Monday morning the Bristol, Newtown & Doylestown trolleys commenced to run up to the trolley terminus, at the Fountain House, much to the satisfaction of their patrons but they put on an additional five cent fare between Doylestown and Newtown, much to the disgust of their patrons. It is now about the best road coming into Doylestown.

RUMORS OF CANDIDATES.

Where will the Bucks County Liquor League hold its April meeting? It is rumored that Bristol is to be honored with their presence this time. It is said that Bristol's "fighting parson," the Reverend William Johnston, would accept a nomination as a candidate for the Legislature, perhaps the Liquor League will offer him one; but he will have to make a change in some of his talk and also promise to vote against Local Option. If the Liquor League should finally determine to break with Grundy and run a ticket of their own, Bucks county voters would have at least four sets of candidates to choose from and it would make a very interesting fight. The more the merrier for all but Grundy, for him it means the more candidates the more barrels will be tapped. Already it has taken all he made by farming last season and has eaten a hole in his chicken and egg money. It is an expensive thing to be a boss if you are the real article.

MANY MOVINGS.

First of April was very dull here this year. The bank and two trust companies were busier than usual, as a matter of course, but they did very little over-time work. Real estate transactions are now scattered through the whole year and even first of April, as the recognized moving time, has fewer movings every year. A large number of Doylestown people have changed their residence and many have moved out of the town but their places have been speedily filled. Houses are at a premium here. The demand is far in excess of the supply, but there will probably be a number put up this summer which will rent as soon as they are fit to move into.

SCHOOL BOARD BUYS PROPERTY.

The School Board has purchased the George P. Brock property adjoining the present high school building and will remodel the house in the fall, using it for the sub-primary and primary grades, thus relieving the very much congested condition that now exists and which will become worse if the contemplated enlargement of the county seat takes place. We now have suburbs which have all the advantages of the borough but are not in it and as the township taxes are about the same as those of the borough, the owners of property, especially in the southwest side want to come in. This will necessitate another ward for the borough.

SEWER TROUBLES.

Doylestown sewer troubles may soon be remedied. A bondholders' committee from Morrisville and Trenton visited the plant and will report to a general meeting of the bondholders. It is said that the bondholders will be asked to abate a small portion of their interest to be devoted to permanent improvements. No other town but Doylestown would have stood for the nuisance this long. It will never do to allow the present trouble conditions to continue for another year and as the State Board of Health has taken a hand we may soon have relief.

WATER TROUBLES.

Doylestown Borough Council refused to elect again their old Borough Engineer at the water works, William Wintyen, and elected William Hudson in his place. At midnight, March 31, Wintyen, after having filled the reservoir, walked out; the next morning Hudson walked in. Hudson had to assist him two or three other engineers, experts on pumps, but the big Holly pump refused to work for them until late on Saturday night. Naturally all sorts of stories were in circulation the worst of which was that we had no fire protection and that if a fire broke out the whole town would go. Wintyen, who thoroughly understands the Holly engine and pump, said that had there been an alarm of fire he would at once have offered his services so that we would have had all the water necessary.

Not satisfied with having taken Wintyen's job from him several members of Council were making uncalled for attacks on the man and it is no wonder that he felt sore at them. But to cap the climax, five of them went to the plant on Sunday morning. The Holly apparatus was closed down and while they were discussing it a stranger walked in. He walked around awhile and then started the Holly engine and pump at their full speed; naturally something had to give way and the something was the large supply main between the water works and the reservoir. The water was promptly shut off but not until it had materially lowered the visible supply in the reservoir and families living east of Broad street, between Main and State streets, were without any water for several hours. Things are in such a bad condition at the plant that an expert from the Holly works, at Lockport, N. Y., has been sent for and by the time Council pays the bill, the treasury will again be empty with our borrowing limit fully reached. No improvements for Doylestown this year.

Oxford Valley.

Samuel Niblick, who has been critically ill, is improving.

A. F. Hibbs is Christian Endeavor leader next Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sutton were visiting in Edgewood on Sunday.

Mrs. A. F. Hibbs is confined to the house with muscular rheumatism.

John L. Tomlinson had a telephone installed in his residence last week.

Misses Elva Blinn and Ada Fabian, of Newtown, visited relatives here on Saturday and Sunday.

Henry Van Sickles, from near Dunlap station, died on Tuesday evening from a complication of diseases.

Rev B. F. Paist preached in the chapel on Sunday afternoon, using for his text, John 13, the 30th verse.

The Oyster Supper by the L. T. L. on Saturday evening was well attended and a success both financially and socially. The tables were decorated with hyacinths, narcissus and carnations and laden with a variety of good things pleasing to the appetite, providing a complete supper in addition to the oysters.

The following movings took place in this neighborhood on April 1st: Samuel Titus from James Moon's farm to Newportville; Aaron Ahlem from above Woodbourne to the farm vacated by Titus; Randall Cummins from the tenant house on the Gillam farm to the Charles South property, near Roelofs; Joshua South to place vacated by Cummins.

Andalusia.

Mrs. Alfred Kirk was seriously ill all last week.

Mr. McShane was up from Philadelphia last week.

Dr. Van Buren was over from Germantown last week.

The moving pictures on Saturday evening last attracted a large audience and gave good satisfaction, according to the small boys, one of whom said to us in familiar vernacular, "Oh, that was all right."

The death of Harry C. Forrest at Torresdale on Sunday, though not unexpected after his long and very painful illness, caused deep sympathy with all the members of his family to whom he had been a notably kind and generous father for so many years.

We congratulate Mr. and Mrs. William Hoagland on the advent of a son, born to them on Thursday of last week. Mrs. Hoagland was Miss Ethel Frease, a daughter of Nathaniel Frease, of this village, and until her marriage and removal to Eddington closely connected with our parish and social activities.

If the early spring manifestations so notably evident during these wonderful days continue to hold good, Andalusia will be very attractive this summer and will justly mean the title which the Gazette sometimes places at the head of our special column, "The Beautiful Suburb." We always say a silent thank you to the printer when we read the appreciative words.

We hope we are not unduly trespassing on the kindness and good nature of the editor of the Gazette if we ask him to publish the enclosed clipping from the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin of April 5th in the Andalusia notes.

Judge Biddle is one of whom we are all justly proud, and any honor done to him is always a matter of great satisfaction to our people with whom his name has been associated for all the years of his distinguished life:

"Craig Biddle, the venerable Prothonotary of the Court of Common Pleas, was today sworn in for another term of three years. President Judge Bregy, of Court No. 1, administered the oath of office. James W. Fletcher, chief deputy, presented to his chief a handsome basket of spring flowers, a gift from the clerks in the office. Judge Biddle received congratulations from a number of the Judges and members of the bar.

Catarrh Cannot be Cured

with local applications, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. GIVING OUT.

The Struggle Discourages Many a Citizen of Bristol.

Around all day with an aching back;
Can't rest at night;
Enough to make any one "give out."
Doan's Kidney Pills will give renewed life.
They will cure the backache;
Cure every kidney ill.
Here is Bristol proof that this is so;

Mrs. Amanda McDonnall, 634 Race street, Bristol, Pa., says: "For a number of years I was rarely free from pain in my back and at times it was difficult for me to get about. The kidney secretions were irregular in passage and generally caused distress when being voided. My health was poor and my nerves were all unstrung. Although I did everything I could think of in an effort to get relief, I did not improve. When almost discouraged Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my attention and I procured a supply. I was surprised with the results of their use. In less than a month all the pain had been removed from my back and I was in much better health. I have never taken a remedy that could compare with Doan's Kidney Pills."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

One Way Out.

Perkins had been appointed tutor to the young lord of the manor, and together they were making the grand tour. Perkins was congratulating himself on the excellent behavior of his pupil; but, alas, they had only reached Geneva when his charge fell deeply in love with a pretty Swiss peasant. In vain did he remonstrate with the young lord, pointing out the social barrier that existed between the lovers and the total impossibility of marriage. But all to no purpose. The beautiful Swiss maiden held the young lord's heart captive, and he would scarcely leave her side.

Distracted, Perkins wrote home to the marchioness asking her advice and pointing out her son's infatuation.

A day or two passed in agonizing suspense.

At last the answer came. Perkins breathed a sigh of relief. All his anxiety would now be over. He tore open the envelope, but as he read the letter he groaned in the anguish of his soul. It consisted of three words:

"Marry her yourself."

An English Fish Story.

Brown had returned from a fishing expedition and after partaking of a most welcome dinner was relating some of his fishing experiences.

"Last year," said he, "while fishing for pike I dropped half a sovereign. I went to the same place this year, and after my line had been cast a few minutes I felt a terrific pull. Eventually I landed a fine pike, which had swallowed the hook, and on cutting it open to release the hook, to my amazement"—

"Ah," said his friends, "you found a half sovereign."

"Oh, no," replied Brown. "I found 9s. 6d. in silver and threepence in copper."

"Well, what became of the other threepence?" queried his friends.

"I suppose the pike paid that to go through the lock," answered Brown.—London Tatler.

Subduing a Bully.

A writer in a Vladivostok paper tells of an encounter he once witnessed on a Siberian train between a lady and a nobleman.

When the train pulled up at Tsitikar, in Manchuria, a Manchu noble who had bullied all his fellow passengers, alighted at the station restaurant after warning them that he would decapitate any of them who took his seat. During his absence a smartly dressed young Russian lady entered the car and, despite the alarmed expostulations of its occupants, calmly appropriated the seat. When the noble returned he flew into a passion and advanced threateningly with his curved saber drawn. But the young woman coolly covered him with a shining revolver.

"Do you take us for a pack of cowardly mandarins?" she exclaimed, and then, pointing to her feet, she remarked, "Here is your place, my hero."

The Manchu noble surrendered and sat at her feet for the rest of the journey.

Hugo and the Barber.

When Victor Hugo lived in Paris in the Place Royale he used to be shaved by a barber named Brassier. A friend of the poet asked the barber one day if he was busy. "I hardly know which way to turn," was the reply. "We have to dress the hair of thirty ladies for soirees and balls." And M. Brassier showed the list to his friend. A few days after the friend returned and inquired about the thirty ladies. "Ah, monsieur," said the barber sadly, "I was not able to attend half the number, and I have lost many good customers through M. Victor Hugo." It appears that the poet when about to be shaved was suddenly inspired and seized the first piece of paper he could find to write a poem. Hugo hastily left the shop with his unfinished verses, on the back of which were the names and addresses of the thirty ladies, many of whom waited in vain for their coiffeur.

Follow this advice.

Quaker Oats is the best of all foods; it is also the cheapest. When such men as Prof. Fisher of Yale University and Sir James Crichton Browne, LL.D.-F.R.S. of London spend the best parts of their lives in studying the great question of the nourishing and strengthening qualities of different foods, it is certain that their advice is absolutely safe to follow.

Professor Fisher found in his experiments for testing the strength and endurance of athletes that the meat eaters were exhausted long before the men who were fed on such food as Quaker Oats. The powers of endurance of the non-meat eaters were about eight times those of the meat eaters.

Sir James Crichton Browne says—eat more oatmeal, eat plenty of it and eat it frequently. 99

Safe and Sure.

Among the medicines that are recommended and endorsed by physicians and nurses is Kemp's Balsam, the best cough cure. For many years it has been regarded by doctors as the medicine most likely to cure coughs, and it has a strong hold on the esteem of all well-informed people. When Kemp's Balsam cannot cure a cough we shall be at a loss to know what will. At druggists' and dealers', 25c.

A PORTENTOUS STRUGGLE.

The struggle in Congress which resulted in the overthrow of Speaker Cannon and deprived him of the power to name the Committee on Rules and eliminated him as a member of that Committee, and which earlier took from his hands the appointment of the Ballinger investigating committee, is much more than a battle to accomplish those specific purposes.

Associated with the tottering and crumbling power of the Speaker is the disintegration of the Republican organization throughout the country as dominated by the Aldrich-Penrose-Smoot Guggenheim cabal which represents the trusts and predatory interests of the country. There is no patriotic significance in party appellation these days. Republicanism means nothing that appeals to the sense of justice and patriotism of the citizenship of the country.

In Congress the insurgents are utterly lost to party discipline, yet they are enthusiastically sustained by their home constituencies. That the recent violent outbreak against Cannon should have come in the middle of a session constitutes a staggering exposure of the feebleness of party leadership.

The President has attempted to maintain an attitude of aloofness while the contest wages in the House of Representatives, but it is believed that the success of his administration is at stake. While he has taken no part in the actual warfare of the factions he has repeatedly given evidences of his sympathy with the Aldrich-Cannon-Ballinger faction, which fact makes the insurgents fight all the harder. Political history is being made and the African hunter looms bright upon the 1912 horizon.

An Omaha milling company sends us some sample cakes made of meal from the Alfalfa plant. If Alfalfa is such an excellent food for cattle, why not for humans? The M. C. Peters Mill Company, in its circular says, "We do not make these cakes to sell, but to illustrate it is possible that substitutes may be found for the high-priced foods." A ton of Alfalfa made into cakes, will go a long way to relieve hunger.

DEATH OF MYRA KELLY.

It is a pity to lose from life and literature so bright a woman as Myra Kelly. In the New York schools of the East side, where she was a teacher for a good many years, she found a field of intense human interest. Largely her pupils were of the immigrant Jews, quick-witted, ready, responsive and appealing to her human sympathy, and through that furnishing to her active mind the impulse of chronicling the types which our civilization must be recruited from. No one will fail to recall at once a score or so of these gleeful and yet most serious stories which she contributed to the Century, of the Jewish child, boy and girl, whom she loved and who loved her. She had a wonderful faculty for captivating their attention, their respect and their confidence; and her method was simply that of unaffected friendliness and comprehension. Myra Kelly was born in Dublin, Ireland, the daughter of Dr. James E. and Annie Morrogh Kelly; as a child she was educated in New York city schools, and she felt that her preparation had been insufficient when she took her examination for the work, and was surprised when she was given her appointment. Beginning in a big polyglot school east of the Bowery, she became later a critic teacher in the Speyer school of the teachers' college of Columbia University. In 1905 she married Allan MacNaughton. Her books were "Little Citizens," "Isle of Dreams' and "Wards of Liberty," full of humor and abounding in significance for the country of the people. She was yet young, and much more was expected of her, for although her equipment for a literary career was limited, she had that brilliant, humorous outlook on life and that really delicate observation of character, which must have resulted in further writing of value. The home of Mr. and Mrs. MacNaughton was Old Chester, Orange mountains, New Jersey, and her death occurred at Torquay, on the Channel coast of England, where she was staying with her husband. She had been in failing health for a long time.

The Chicago Tribune has conducted another poll, this time among the Independent and Republican editors of the East. The Tribune's question: "Do you endorse the Aldrich Tariff Law?" was answered, "yes" by 197 editors and "no" by 789. Of these 789 eastern papers declaring themselves unable to approve the new tariff, at least 590 are Republican organs. The question, "Is Cannon your choice for Speaker?" (asked before the recent curtailment of the speaker's power) brought responses from 879 Independent and Republican editors who are opposed to Cannon while 155 voted in his favor. The Tribune's poll is significant.

The noses of the members of President Taft's tariff board are out of joint. They don't like the way they were ignored in the first really important case of tariff adjustment that has come up for settlement since this board was organized. It was the squabble with Canada. Instead of turning the matter over to the three experts forming the tariff board the administration called in Charles M. Pepper, a commercial agent of the Department of State. The tariff board which was established at considerable cost with a view to disposing of customs controversies, had the pleasure of looking on while the dispute was adjusted by the State Department.

The imports of sugar (none of it refined) in January, 1910, exceeded by more than 100,000,000 pounds the imports of January, 1909. As much of this sugar was free, or imported from Cuba at a low rate of duty, the Sugar Trust had a double advantage in the cheapness of its raw material and in the exclusion of a competition with its refined product. For such ends, have we a protective tariff.

INDIANA GIVES WARNING.

Indiana is the first Republican State in the great empire of the Middle West to go on record through the medium of a Republican State Convention in favor of insurgency against the high tariff.

On Tuesday that convention endorsed the candidacy of Senator Beveridge and adopted a platform that fairly bristled with insurgent doctrine, and the Senator made a speech to the convention which aroused the greatest enthusiasm.

Senator Beveridge, as temporary chairman, called the convention to order and when in his speech he declared his antagonism to the tariff law passed at the special session of Congress, his words were received with storms of applause from the delegates and the crowded galleries in the hall.

Repeating as a text, "I could not stand for it then and I cannot stand for it now," Senator Beveridge made an impassioned defense of the counts upon which he had based his vote in the Senate against the Payne-Aldrich bill, which he did not call by name. In ringing voice he sent his short sentences through the hall.

"Like President Taft, I wanted free iron ore, of which we have the greatest deposits on earth and which the Steel Trust chiefly controls," he said. "I could not stand for the duty that was passed and I cannot stand for it now.

"Like President Taft, I wanted on the free list many raw materials that needed no protection. Yet only one was so treated. I could not stand for the duties on these articles and I cannot stand for them now.

"Like President Taft, I wanted the ancient woolen schedule reduced. It gives to the Woolen Trust unfair control and raises the price and reduces the weight of the people's clothing. I stood against this schedule when the bill was passed and I stand against it now.

"I could not stand for the duty on lumber when the tariff bill was passed and I cannot stand for it now.

"I stood against the increase of the duty on cotton goods and I stand against it now.

"The reduction of the tariff on refined sugar is a deception, because it cannot affect the price. Yet that is one of the boasted reductions we hear of.

"These are examples of increases. I was against them then and I am against them now. From few, if any, of the decreases do the people get the slightest benefit.

"I was for a law that would have protected the wages of every working man in Indiana and yet enable that working man to get his clothing and creature comforts cheaper—and such a law could have been written, and it shall be written."

The newspaper dispatches stated that Senator Beveridge never was more compelling in his oratory. His lithe figure quivered with earnestness as, pointing his forefinger skyward, he shouted:

"The coming battle is not so much between political parties, as such, as between the rights of the people and the powers of pillage."

The building trembled from the applause.

Again the crowd roared its approval when, of an organization of politicians banded together for selfish profit, Senator Beveridge said:

"Such an organization is not a party; it is a band of brigands. Such organizations and men are the tools and agents of lawless interests which know no party, attempt to use all parties and practice only the policies of profit."

Senator Beveridge was merciless in his denunciation of a tariff which "exacts exorbitant prices for necessities and which everybody in this country needs, but which nobody can produce." It was in this way that he answered the Democratic demands for a tariff for revenue only and appealed for a common-sense revision of the tariff to "give more to the people and less to the interests."

In another part of his speech Senator Beveridge said that every economical policy, every political system, almost every government had been destroyed because of excesses and injustice that crept into it. "McKinley saw this," he said, "when he declared in his last speech that in tariff matters 'the period of exclusiveness is past.'

"Senator Morrell, the father of the war tariff of 1864, saw it when he declared in 1870: 'It is the mistake of the friends of a sound tariff to insist on extreme rates proposed during the war if less will raise the necessary revenue.'

"Garfield saw it when he said: 'The wisest thing protectionists can do is to unite on a moderate reduction of duties.'

"Theodore Roosevelt saw it when he said at Logansport, Ind., in 1902: 'What we really need in this country is to treat tariff as a business proposition from the standpoint of the interests of the country as a whole, and not from the standpoint of the temporary needs of any political party.'"

The Indiana convention is a portentious event.

The surprising information comes from "down East" that insurgency is running riot in the staid old State of Maine and that Senator Hale is threatened with defeat. This information comes as a shock to the regulars. They expect popular upheavals among the untutored of Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa. But it pained them to be told that progressivism, radicalism or whatever else the thing may be termed, has spread to a "rock ribbed" Republican State like Maine.

Senator Hale comes up for re-election next winter and it looks as though he might have to engage in an undignified scramble to retain his seat. No one has ever accused Senator Hale of being an insurgent.

Imperial Rome, the Eternal City, occupied a conspicuous place in the date lines of the news items of the daily papers this week.

Public School Notes.

The opening exercises of the high school and ninth grade on Friday morning were unusually interesting. The singing of the two-part songs was excellent. But the event of special interest was the presentation of a certificate of "Honorable Mention" to James Lawler, ninth grade, from "The Pennsylvania Society Colonial Dames of America." The Bristol members of this society are Mrs. Burnet Landreth and Mrs. Burnet Landreth, Jr.

This society offers prizes each year to the pupils of the highest grammar grades throughout the state. The subject is always historical in its character. This year it was "Braddock's Campaign." These essays are sent to the prize committee of each county; that committee selects the best and sends it to the "Committee on State Prize." This committee makes the final decision. That a Bristol boy received a certificate of "Honorable Mention" this year is especially gratifying when it is remembered that last year in the same contest a Bristol girl, Miss Viola Vansant, won a second prize of a ten-dollar gold piece. The prizes are: first prize, twenty-five dollar gold piece; two second prizes, ten-dollar gold pieces; three certificates of Honorable Mention. Pittsburg submitted more than three-hundred essays to its county committee, but that committee could send only one essay to the State committee. Every pupil of the Ninth Grade, Miss Barthe, teacher, wrote an essay on the subject. The class was ambitious to win the first prize. We congratulate teacher and pupils on their success.

In the Ledger contest last year for the best essays on Abraham Lincoln, James Lawler also won a certificate.

Last week there was added to the collection of raw and manufactured specimens now in cases in the Director's Room, high school building, an exhibit of cotton from the seed to the fine thread. This was sent from the Cocon Manufacturing Co., Piedmont, Alabama, through J. W. Hawke, secretary and treasurer of the company. Mr. Hawke was a former Bristol public school boy. These exhibits illustrate very clearly to the pupils the various changes from the seed to the finished thread.

The following grades made excellent percentage of attendance during March:

Second Grade, Bath street, .95.
Eighth Grade, Jefferson avenue, .94.
Ninth Grade, Wood street, .92.
Seventh Grade, Bath street, .92.
Fifth Grade, Bath street, .92.
Eighth Grade, Bath street, .91.
High School, .91.
Seventh Grade, Jefferson avenue, .90.
Second Grade, Wood street, .90.
Fourth Grade, Bath street, .90.

There has been a very marked improvement in punctuality. Tardiness is a very serious matter and every effort is being made by the teachers to overcome it. The following rooms made the best records for the last two weeks:

Eighth Grade, Jefferson avenue, one pupil late.
Eighth Grade, Bath street, two pupils late.
Seventh Grade, Bath street, two pupils late.
Seventh Grade, Jefferson avenue, three pupils late.
Fourth Grade, Washington street, three pupils late.

Letter to Thomas B. Harkins.

Bristol, Pa.

Dear Sir: A new word has come into use in paint; it is strong. Strong paint is paint as strong as paint can be. Weak paint is paint not so strong.

If one paint takes 10 gallons to do a job and another 15, the 10-gallon paint is the stronger.

If one paint wears 10 years, and another 5, the 10-year paint is the stronger.

The strongest paint is the one that takes least gallons and wears longest.

But do such differences exist? Yes and greater. Devoe is the strongest of all. A job that takes 10 gallons Devoe lasts more than 30 of some. And a job of Devoe wears several times as long as a job of some paints.

O. E. Perry, East 5th street, Erie, Pa., painted two houses same size; same time; with two paints same price; took 3 gallons Devoe to 4 of the other; and in three years Devoe was the better looking job.

There are strong and weak paints; we all want the strongest; paint can't be too strong.

Yours truly

46 F W Devoe & Co

(Responsible articles that have been written by competent authorities and have appeared in print.)

AN "INFANT INDUSTRY."

Consider now for a moment that "infant industry" for which we bleed. The Havemeyer sugar business was founded in 1803—during Jefferson's time. It flourished and grew space in days before "protection" was so much as dreamed of. As an "infant industry" the Sugar Trust is one hundred and seven years old—a gray and wrinkled babe. The present sugar generation is the fourth generation. This fourth generation inherited its trade of sugar, its millions, and its personal inconsequence. It originated nothing, embarked in nothing risked nothing. It was simply born. Still it must be "protected." Still we must be penalized, pillaged, taxed, robbed, skinned, whatever you will, that an annual $128,000,000 may be forthcoming wherewith to stuff its already stuffed-to-bursting idle, insane pocket.

It would be hard to count what matters go to the furnishing of a table and which by the Payne-Aldrich movement have been tariffed to the eyes and ears. Get to work with a pencil, bunch your fists, and what is the outcome? You find that in the one element of food and table furnishings the Payne-Aldrich bill has arranged an average tax upon every American family of over $95 a year. The effect of what schedules impose that table tax of ninety-five annual dollars is for the greater part prohibitive. As incident to that $95, they won't put $3 into the Treasury. In short, those schedules were meant, not to produce a revenue, but to fatten trusts.

The meeting of Mohican Tribe of Red Men will be held on Saturday evening of this week instead of next Monday evening on account of a visitation of tribes from Philadelphia. All members are requested to be present.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Scott, Radcliffe street, at noon on Monday. Mr. Scott, who is assistant cashier at the Farmers' National Bank, is now the proud father of three girls.

Jonathan Gosline, a former Bristolian, son of the late William Gosline, died recently in Philadelphia, in his 70th year. The deceased was formerly a shoemaker here and learned his trade with the late Alexander Morrison.

The first haul of the big shore net at the Badger fishery was made on Monday when twenty-five shad were caught. The gillers with their drift nets are meeting with fair success and some fine specimens of shad are being caught.

Dr. H. Pursell and Franklin Gilkeson, of Bristol, and Samuel Davis, of Bensalem, acting as a commission in lunacy, last Friday examined Allen Vandegrift, of Bensalem, at the Blockley hospital, Philadelphia, and adjudged him insane.

Frank Horn is building an apartment house of twenty rooms, divided into three apartments at the corner of 9th and Asbury streets, Ocean City, N. J., Mr. Horn will conduct a grocery and meat store on the ground floor, beginning about June 1st.

Within a few days work will commence on the new church building which will be devoted for the purpose of an Italian Protestant mission. The building will be constructed of stone and brick and will be located at the corner of Lincoln avenue and Wood streets.

The marble yard business conducted by the late Joseph Bannister will be continued by the estate, of which Joseph S. Peirce, Jr., is administrator. The foreman of the yard who was with Mr. Bannister for many years will continue the practical management of the business.

Heacock & Hokanson, the architects who designed the Jefferson avenue school building, were one of the five prize winners in the competition plans prepared for an official water gate to New York City, which were erected during the Fulton celebration and cost $2,500,000. There were sixty-three competitors. The award was $500.

McMullen Brothers have installed a four-horse power Perkins gas engine at the ice cream manufacturing plant of George Johnson on Otter street. Although totally blind Mr. Johnson operates the machinery at his plant himself. It is really marvelous to see him at work. After the new engine was put in he went all over it carefully with his hands and noted every point, and then said "It's a beauty, isn't it!"

Joseph Swann, of Spruce street, who was taken to the St. Francis Hospital at Trenton, two weeks ago, suffering from diabetes, died Tuesday evening. The remains were brought to Bristol by Undertaker Murphy. Deceased was about sixty years of age. Mr. Swann leaves four daughters and one son, two in England, one in Canada and one daughter and a son in Philadelphia. The funeral will be held from the residence of Undertaker W. I. Murphy, Garden street, tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. Rev. Moorhouse will conduct the services. Interment at Bristol Cemetery.

Harry Hartman, who has been in the employ of J. H. Vansant for several years, was arrested last Thursday night by Officers Tice and Bloodgood, charged with threatening to kill Mr. Vansant, with whom he lived on Mill street. Late Thursday night, Hartman went home under the influence of liquor and demanded two dollars of Vansant and when it was refused he picked up a shot gun, inserted two shells and threatened to blow Vansant's head off, if the money was not given. Vansant escaped out a door and notified the police, who arrested Hartman and placed him in the station house. On Friday, in default of bail, Hartman was taken to the Doylestown jail to await trial.

MAY RAISE THE SCHOOL TAX RATE

President of School Board Declares Present Rate of Seventy-five Produces Insufficient Revenue. Proceedings of Meeting.

In an informal talk to the members of the Bristol School Board at the regular meeting on Wednesday evening, President William V. Leech stated that the time had come in the fiscal affairs of the school district when the school tax must be raised.

The present rate of seventy-five cents on the $100, the President stated, is insufficient to meet the demands which the Board is compelled to meet. Under the present conditions the board is compelled each year to borrow money from the banks at the end of each term to meet the regular expenses of the district, and Mr. Leech said he did not think it either wise nor expedient to conduct the business in that manner. He declared the Board should get together and estimate the expenses for the next fiscal year and then fix a tax rate accordingly.

The members of the board present were: Messrs. Leech, Rue, Foster, Booz, Taylor, LeCompte, Green, Boyle and Young.

TREASURER'S REPORT.

Treasurer Foster reported that all orders drawn at last meeting had been paid and that there remained in the general fund the sum of $2,012.49. The balance in the bond account amounted to $40. There was received during the month for tuition of non-residents, $34.75. Received from Collector Kraft, $200. Returned from the piano fund, $3.

COMMITTEE REPORTS.

The Property committee reported that the Grundy tablet in the Jefferson avenue school building was unveiled with appropriate ceremony on March 8.

The Library committee reported the purchase of 43 volumes of historical reference and standard works. The question of book cases for the Jefferson avenue and Bath street buildings was referred to the chairman of the Property committee.

TRUANT OFFICER'S REPORT.

The truant officer reported cases of 31 delinquents had been attended to during the month and the investigations revealed that most of them were the result of sickness.

DIRECTOR LOUDER RESIGNS.

A communication was read from Moses Louder, member of the board from the Fifth ward tendering his resignation as he intends to move to Ohio, on the 15th inst. The resignation was accepted.

SUPERINTENDENTS' REPORTS.

The superintendent submitted the attendance reports for February and March.

February report—No. pupils enrolled, 1088; greatest number present, 1088; least number present, 753; average attendance, 914; present every half-day, 274; new pupils admitted, 10.

March report—Pupils enrolled, 1079; greatest number present, 1022, least number present, 828; average attendance, 924; present every half-day, 327; new pupils admitted, 10.

Miss Baggs verbally reported that the March attendance was the largest in a number of years. She also stated that 291 new pupils had been admitted to the schools since last June.

Orders were ordered drawn for the payment of the superintendent's, teachers' and janitors' salaries.

INSURANCE ON NEW BUILDING.

The Property committee was instructed to place insurance in the amount of $15,000 for one year on the Jefferson avenue building, proposing that next year a perpetual policy be taken out.

BILLS PASSED.

The following bills were read and orders were ordered drawn for their payment:

Punctual Scholars.

The following pupils of the Laurel Bend school in the township have been present every day since the term began in September, seven months ago: Harold Elberson, Edward Githens, Caroline Weger, Eliza Scheetz, Florence Prinold, Emma Pitzonka, Margaret Patterson, Helen Githens, Viola Boke and Bertha Boke. M. M. Malcolm, teacher.

Frank F. Bell Honored.

The following special from Boston to the Philadelphia Press is concerning Frank F. Bell, one of Bristol's well known and popular young men, son of the late Frank F. Bell:

Boston, April 3.—The greatest honor in the four years of student life at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology has been conferred upon Frank F. Bell, of Bristol, Pa., by his election as first marshal for the Class Day of the graduating class of this year.

Bell was chosen by a majority of one vote over Adams Gould, of Boston. Bell is prominent in the social and athletic life of the college.

Reporter Pollock's Father Dead.

Albert Pollock, 52 years old, of 2157 North 15th street, Philadelphia, father of Leo Pollock, Bristol reporter for the Grundy daily, died suddenly at Connelsville, Pa., on Monday. Mr. Pollock was taken ill on a trolley car and died within a short time. Mr. Pollock had left his home two weeks ago feeling perfectly well. On Monday his family had a letter from him which said that he was ill in health and expected to be home by Friday.

Mr. Pollock was a traveling salesman for the novelty firm of A. Steinhardt & Bro., of New York. He had been going through Pennsylvania for thirty years and had many friends on the route. The funeral was held yesterday from the deceased's late residence. The interment was at Mt. Sinai cemetery.

LOCAL POLITICS.

The following special with a Doylestown date line appeared in the Philadelphia Sunday North American:

High hopes are now entertained by Assemblyman Clarence J. Buckman, of Langhorne, Bucks county's legislative lightweight, that when the next session begins at Harrisburg he will be allowed to occupy the seat held for the past eight years by Senator Webster Grim.

Buckman, it is announced, has decided definitely that he will not run again for membership in the House, but will seek the Republican nomination for the Senate. This is regarded as equivalent to a statement of the slating of Buckman for the senate job of Joseph R. Grundy, the weathy boss of the county, as Buckman would hardly venture to so commit himself without Grundy's permission.

As a candidate, Buckman is weaker by far than either Irvin Aaron or Warren S. Cressman, Republican senatorial nominees, who were defeated, respectively, in 1902 and 1906, by Senator Grim, a Democrat. In fact, Buckman has less to commend him particulary than almost any candidate Grundy could select. At Harrisburg last year he trailed along with the Philadelphia gang, but the city gangsters did not take him very seriously, and aside from accepting his vote had little to do with him.

Many of the machine Republicans here are not satisfied with Buckman as a candidate for the Senate, and there has been a demand for the slating of a stronger man, but in spite of this he seems to have won the approval of the boss.

Assemblyman Isaac Clymer, who also voted with the Philadelphia gang last session, will probably be renominated for the House. His colleague for the House on the machine ticket will be Franklin Gilkeson, son of the late B. Frank Gilkeson, who ran the county organization some years ago and held the offices of state banking commissioner and Republican state chairman.

In accordance with the policy of Grundy, the money man now at the head of machine affairs, all aspirants for nominations except those slated will doubtless be suppressed before the primaries if it can be done.

Both Buckman for the Senate and Gilkeson for the House, on getting things fixed to run on the machine ticket, went through the farce of "responding to popular demand" for their candidacies, Buckman was "surprised" with a summons to duty from a visiting delegation of machine committeemen, while Gilkeson was equally "astonished" when waited upon by a party of Bristol firemen, headed by the Grundy burgess, Henry E. Ancker.

Hon. Irving P. Wanger, who has served the Congressional district comprised of Bucks and Montgomery counties for eighteen years in the House of Representatives, will "not have any opposition in the Republican ranks for re-nomination at the primaries, June 4 next," according to the edict of Joseph R. Grundy's personal organ, the Doylestown Intelligencer. Mr. Wanger has formally announced his candidacy and is having his petitions prepared which will require the signatures of at least 200 voters of the district. This action practically sets at rest the recent intimation that Mr. Wanger was to retire from Congress and be appointed on the Panama Canal Commission at an annual salary of $7,500.

According to the state primary law candidates for nominations for the Legislature must file their petitions with the Secretary of the Commonwealth not later than Saturday, May 7. The primary election will take place on Saturday, June 4. The petitioners of candidates for State Senator must contain at least 200 names and those of Representatives 50 names. Blank forms of petitions for all offices are supplied by the County Commissioners.

The Manufacturers' Association, of Philadelphia, of which our own Joseph R. Grundy is a shining light, have probably not allowed it to escape their attention that Mr. Eugene Foss, the Democratic Representative-elect from the Fourteenth Massachusetts Congress district, who turned a 14,000 Republican majority into a 5,000 Democratic majority, is a manufacturer himself and a convert to tariff reform, says the Doylestown Democrat.

Mr. Foss is a member of the New England Cotton Manufacturers' Association, of the New England Shoe and Leather Association and of the National Manufacturers' Association. He is spoken of by one writer as a business John the Baptist, pointing the way to national emancipation from the narrowness of protectionism. He favors free raw material, reciprocal trade and a pulling down of tariff bars.

These are the kind of men who are coming to the Democratic party—progressive, liberal-minded men, who are tired of the Republican party, which has apparently no higher motive in being than to serve the trusts and monopolies that are not only destroying commerce and trade but are taking their toll from every consumer in the way of increased cost of the necessaries of life.

Constable Peze Dead.

Constable John Peze, a prominent politician of Morrisville, died at his home on Monday after a prolonged illness. The deceased for a number of years was Morrisville's representative on the Republican County Committee and was a loyal lieutenant of the Grundy-Minster organization.

The deceased was born fifty-seven years ago and had always lived in Morrisville. He was a staunch Republican and held the office of high constable for two terms and was serving as county constable at the time of his death. Until Morrisville was divided into two wards, he was Republican county committeeman. When the division was made, he was retained as committeeman from the First ward. Attorney L. R. Bond being appointed from the Second ward. He was a member of Century Council, No. 100, Jr., O. U. A. M., Unity Temple, No. 9, O. U. A., and Bristol Lodge, No. 970, B. P. O. E.

Mrs. Peze and three children survive. They are Mrs. Harry C. Ketz and William and John Peze.

Funeral services were held from the residence of Mrs. Ketz, Mill street, yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment was in Morrisville cemetery. The Bristol Lodge of Elks attended the funeral in a body.

An Early Bird.

Dear Editor:—I had the pleasure of visiting the country home of Franklin Baker, at Bridgewater, during the week. The place is in charge of Mr. Kimbel, who came there from Delaware, two years ago. Mr. Kimbel has a fine flock of chickens and he has a secret by which he can make them lay eggs. The total output of eggs for the month of March was 710, and for the last five months, 1,650. This is very good in my way of thinking, considering the roughness of the winter months, as it takes great care of hens to get them to lay during the winter months. I take great delight in visiting these country places and people always tell me that they have great trouble in getting their hens to lay all winter.

Mr. Baker also purchased a setting of eggs from a dealer at $36 per setting of fifteen and at the time of my visit, thirteen little chicks from the fifteen eggs were running around about two weeks old. Mr. Kimbel also has a very early garden. He is not afraid that Jack Frost will come and ruin his plants, as he will be up earlier than Jack Frost has time to get away, and save them. Mr. Kimble has onions from the seed three or four inches high, also radishes, peas, beets and several other garden vegetables, growing at a very rapid pace for this time of year.

Altogether Mr. Kimble's garden and chickens do him great credit and it would do well for others to copy from him and be up and doing. Mr. Kimble will be glad to show friends his garden and chickens.

A READER.

A HISTORY OF RADCLIFFE STREET

Mr. Editor: Sometime ago I intimated to you that I would write up an article for your paper in regard to the history of Radcliffe street, Bristol. I had not forgotten my promise, but was just waiting to gather some data that would make the article more interesting to your readers.

My subject therefore is Radcliffe street, away back in the Fifties and will first take the east side. If I succeed in this my first attempt at literary work I will in my next give you what know about the west side.

Near the Hollow Bridge, so called, there stands just south of the antique structure an unpretentous little dwelling not very large in any degree. In this little dwelling lived one Alexander Condy, a good citizen of our town, who taught school in the winter season and when there was any work tolled in the ship yard just adjacent. Mr. Condy was a calker by trade and followed this occupation when there was any work in this yard. In the larger one of the row of brick houses lived one Charles Thompson, who owned this property and carried on the business for a time.

There came however, two people under the firm name of Risley & Wright, who built two vessels of good size named the "William H. White" and "Nathan Tyler.".

By the way, a number of our citizens were holders of vessel stock which proved to be a good investment on account of the coal trade to and from our town. The writer worked in this yard at the liberal pay of fifty cents per day, and boarded himself, attempting to learn the trade. Just think of it, and compare it with the present, with beef at 28 to 30 cents a pound.

Adjoining this property, what is now called the Worrell property, there lived General William Montgomery, a retired army officer, with his family together with Thomas and William Wood. General Montgomery was a gentleman of the old school, showing his military training.

Next adjoining there lived Francis Jacoby. He, too, was a type of the old school respected by his friends and faultless in his dress. I remember him when he kept a horse and buggy, and John Weaver was his driver and general utility man. This mansion of Mr. Jacoby's has been remodeled and the residence of Clifford L. Anderson added to the lot owned by Mr. Jacoby.

As we are walking southward on this street on the site of the Jonathan Wright estate there stood just back from the street, obscured almost with shrubbery and flowers, a quaint old house 1 1-2 story high in which lived Samuel Bankson, the father of Mrs. Reuben Pedrick. Adjoining this is the Robert Beatty homestead an old residence where Robert Beatty reared a large family and was a man of noble character and at one time cashier of our bank.

Well I remember Beatty's hill in winter when the coasting was good and also the bathing ground in the summer in the Delaware. A few of us boys were always welcome to enjoy the sports and pleasures at the Beatty home.

We now have come to the property of the late John K. Wildman which at the time I am writing of was occupied by William M. Downing, the father of our townsman, William M. Downing, the flour merchant. Mr. Downing was an agent of one of the coal companies which were located in Bristol at that time.

Adjoining this property in the yellow mansion there lived Lucius H. Scott, a fine, noble gentleman, an honored member of Bristol Lodge No. 25, also of St. James Church, a man whom if once seen you would always remember.

We now have reached what has always been known as the "haunted house," the property then of a Miss Sarah Keene, who also owned a brick house corner 10th and Chestnut street, Philadelphia, where the Mutual Life Building now stands. This sombre looking house with no visible sign of life or cheerfulness about it had stood unmolested nor inspected for many years until recently when I have been told one of our ladies took a party through it for inspection. One, William Whitely, with his family, lived in the basement at that time.

We have now arrived at the palatial mansion now occupied by our fellow townsman, Joseph R. Grundy. This property was once owned and occupied by Captain Joseph B. Hutchinson, Sr., who lived there and was the father of Joseph B. Hutchinson, of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Mr. Hutchinson was a gentleman of the old school and lived here before erecting the stone edifice on the Beaver Dam road. This house was once occupied by Robert Tyler, a relative of ex-president Tyler. Mrs. Tyler was a descendant of Thomas Cooper the tragedian, who figured in the theatrical world in the days of Edwin Forrest. Unfortunately I might say, Mr. Tyler espoused the cause of the Southern Confederacy at the beginning of the rebellion. Although holding a good position, I think in the Philadelphia Courts, he took up with a cause that was not worthy of the support of any man and that finally ended in its overthrow and caused much distress and expense to our country. He had a fine family. Mrs. Tyler was a highly educated woman, of fine social qualities and well thought of in our community.

On the site of the residence of John C. Stuckert and others there stood an old brick dwelling which was called the "old bake house." It has been said it was used as a hospital during the Revolutionary war. It also has been said that Lafayette stopped there for a time, so you see our town has a more than passing record of figuring in the war of the revolution.

At or about the river front of Dr. Lecompte's there was a fine beach at the river edge which was used by our Baptist people, as a place to administer the rite of baptism by immersion. C. J. Page was the pastor in charge and frequently conducted these exercises. Mr. Page was here for some years and was a strong exponent of the Bible as well as a staunch advocate of Temperance.

There were no houses from this spot to Walnut street, where we find a building now occupied by the Order of Elks, originally called the Beaver Meadow House, kept as a boarding house by a Mrs. Crooks.

Let me say that from this point to the Laing property, outside the borough limits, there was a string of wharves upon which were stored thousands of tons of coal which came to Bristol via the canal and was unloaded from boats carrying from 75 to 90 tons and then re-loaded on vessels for eastern points. This required a vast amount of manual labor and consequently gave employment to a large class, who kept up these boarding houses. This industry did much to build up a business for Bristol and added to the thriving prosperity of the town at that time. Other facilities having developed the coal industry in a wholesale sense is a thing of the past in the history of Bristol.

Adjoining lots with the Elks property is the residence of Ernest Lawrence, which is of a more recent origin.

We come to a brick dwelling wherein Jesse W. Knight now resides formerly occupied by W. B. Baker, but at the time of my story was the residence of Captain Lloyd B. Newell. Mr. Newell, was a retired Navy Officer and lived with us for a number of years. A Commodore Shaw also made his home with him. It was also occupied by William H. Dickinson a prominent lawyer in his day.

Next we find on the site of the new house of the Johnson family, two or three dwellings owned by one Benjamin Brown, who was a respected resident of our town. William Tabram lived on this property and carried on a business of dealer in rags, iron and second hand articles in general and did a good business. In the small house standing back from the street there lived a Mr. Harlan and family.

The large dwelling now occupied by Dr. Frank Lehman was built by a John Magoffin, who with his wife, lived there for a number of years. The house is probably the best built house of its kind in the town and it is said that Mr. Magoffin superintended the erection of his home and that any material that was not up to the standard he would not let it go in the construction. Mr. and Mrs. Magoffin were members of the Presbyterian Church and were well known for their deeds of charity and example of the true Christian life. Mr. Magoffin would frequently on Sundays in summer, wend his way to the canal basin and there gather a lot of the boatmen together and expound to them the teaching of God's word from the Bible.

There lived in a yellow house, where the beautiful home of G. M. Dorrance now stands, a Mrs. John Myers, a fine widow, a member of St. James Church, at one time its organist in the old edifice, where I have seen her preside at the organ, during the pastorate of William S. Perkins. Mrs. Myers was a noble specimen of a lady in its truest sense, kind, charitable and a devout Christian.

On the opposite side of Mulberry street hill there lived Captain George Breck who had a military career but I cannot recall of what kind. He also was a member of St. James Church, a perfect gentleman well known in our town for his many good qualities.

We have now arrived at a point in our narrative covering the imposing structure of the Farmers' National Bank of Bucks county, a building of imposing architecture standing for years as sentinel guarding the peoples' money; an institution solid as a rock and managed by men of strict integrity until to day it is second to none in the county and would no doubt be on an equality with any in the State. Robert Beatty was its cashier, assisted by Charles Iredell, both good men. It is now managed by our genial townsman, Charles E. Scott and his son Thomas as assistant, both able financiers.

An incident comes to my mind that will illustrate the faith our people have in this institution. There was an old Irishman in our town who had through economy saved quite a sum of money in the way of gold, there being a premium on the same during the war. It was his custom to consult a friend as to what it was selling for; when one day he finally sold it and received in exchange greenbacks for the same; and it is said that he had such confidence in our bank that he exchanged the greenbacks for our bank's issue of notes, never dreaming that if the government went up, the bank notes would be no good.

Where Tom Scott now lives there lived a family by the name of Vezin for quite a time and w afterward occupied by a Mrs. Fraily and also A. L. Packer.

The two brick houses next adjoining were not built until quite recently as well as the building of the Bristol Trust Company, this being erected but a short time back, as it is composed in its board of officers of some of our best citizens there is no reason why it should not succeed in its mission and thereby benefit its stockholders and the community in general. There stood on the site of this a large mansion where John Dorrance and family once resided for quite a season and was afterward used later on by William Fabian as a furniture and house furnishing store.

John Dorrance was an old resident of our town and had large business interests, was a senior member of the firm of Dorrance & Knight also Dorrance & Doron who managed the old mill for many years. He was interested in the railroad and other enterprises, was respected by all who knew him and built the mansion now occupied by G. M. Dorrance. He was a member of St. James Church and one of its regular communicants. He lived here and passed away at a good old age well liked and respected by his fellowmen.

Where the post office now stands was a building occupied by a number of persons in different kinds of business, the upper story being used as a public hall for various purposes.

We now come to what was the terminus of the Philadelphia & Trenton Railroad Company where trains were run from Trenton and New York and thence by boat to Philadelphia. This business was carried on prior to 1850 and I clearly recall the trains going and coming down Market street when I was but a small boy. The boat would come to Bristol from Bordentown and there wait for the train and take the passengers to Philadelphia. When quite a boy I sold the Philadelphia newspapers to passengers from Bordentown and Trenton and some mornings would sell from 30 to 50 papers whilst the passengers were being transferred. I think there was only one train a day from Trenton and only two from New York in the early part of its existence in our town. After a time this business was transferred to Tacony; then again to Kensington and finally to Broad street. What a contrast between now and the beginning of 1850. The old depot was used during the war as a storehouse for hay and straw, wherein hundreds of tons were baled and shipped to the front for our army. The building was later on demolished.

The two or three frame buildings adjoining were occupied by different persons during his time. The one that I can recall now was a carpenter named Harrison Brelsford. He was also a ferryman in the winter time when the ferry boat was laid up. Christopher O'Reilly once had a newspaper agency in one of these houses. This brings us to that old hostelry, the Delaware House, (before the days of railroading it was Bessonett's Hotel.) It has been a landmark for many years whilst not now having its original appearance, but being considerably changed by painting, etc., yet it has a history that belongs to our ancient town that is worth thinking over. As I have said it was originally called Bessonett's Hotel, being kept by a man of that name. It was here where passengers who were fatigued with the tedious journey from Philadelphia to New York—(for it took, sixty years ago, two days to get there in a lumbering old stage coach and you had to pay four dollars for the pleasure) stopped to rest over night and also to change horses. I recall an incident written by our townsman, William Kinsey, wherein he stated that there was a rivalry in regard to carrying the mail between this man, Bessonett and a Mr. Reeside, which created an opposition line and handbills were posted throughout the town by the opposition:

Unparalleled speed.
Philadelphia to New York in two days.
Comfort and safety assurred.
Fare, four dollars.

Just think of it when now in 1910 you can travel from Philadelphia to New York on some trains in about 90 minutes. What a contrast, surely we Americans are progressive and hard to beat. This hotel was kept later on by Lewis F. Pratt and others.

Gas was introduced in our town in the fifties and I helped to introduce it in many of the houses on Radcliffe street as a plumber's helper. The plant was established under the supervision of W. M. Goodwin and was successfully managed and is now owned by the Bristol Gas Light Company.

Now let me say that the residents of Radcliffe street as I have spoken of them were people of sterling integrity, well thought of and hold a firm hold on our community as being good citizens. I know whereof I speak, for I had business relations with them and came in contact with them. It was a pleasure to cater to them.

Now, Mr. Editor, I have arrived at the top of the Mill street hill with my history. The most of it is from memory as I recall it. Possibly it may not be worth your trouble to publish it, but if it is of any good, all right. I hope it may interest someone who can recall what I have said in the fifties.

There are not very many in our town who can remember about these things (I do not speak of this boastingly) but I mean the older ones are fast passing away and a new population is growing up in their places.

However, do whatever pruning with these sheets you think best. I am not seeking for literary notoriety nor desiring to see my name in print, but in closing will say you are perfectly free to publish what I have written if you think well of it.

Yours truly,
C. WESLEY MILNOR,
Bristol, Pa.

ARRESTED FOR ALLEGED FORGERY

Moving Picture Lecturer Caught After Three Years' Search by Detectives.

Henry A. Doellinger, or "William Stephen Bush" as he was known in Bristol, and in moving picture circles, was arrested in Philadelphia on Saturday on a fugitive warrant charging forgery.

The excellent memory for faces possessed by Edward R. Slafer, of Brooklyn, a musical director, caused the arrest of Doellinger, or "Bush," in Philadelphia.

In the Central Police Court where he was held by Magistrate Scott, Doellinger denied that he was the man wanted, but his son, Luther, disclosed his father's identity, who was formerly a well known New York attorney.

For three years the police of all large cities have been on the lookout for Doellinger, but, possibly, never would have apprehended him had not Slafer, who years ago was a client of the attorney, recognized him at Tenth and Market streets last Monday morning.

Slafer is director of a musical comedy which played in Philadelphia and was aware that Doellinger was wanted in New York. After recognizing the man, Slafer did a little private detective work, and when he was sure of his man communicated with the District Attorney's office in New York. Detective Flood, of that city, was sent on with a photograph of the fugitive.

The New York sleuth arrived last Saturday and went to detective headquarters, where he was given the assistance of Detective Scanlin, of the local force. The two then communicated with Slafer, who knew the whereabouts of Doellinger, and the arrest was made.

The alleged fugitive was taken at once to the Central Police Court where he was arraigned, but claimed that his arrest was a case of mistaken identity. Assuming an injured air, Doellinger said that his name was Bush, and that he had never lived in New York. Detective Flood then showed Magistrate Scott a photograph and young Doellinger disclosed his father's identity, according to the police.

According to the New York detective, Doellinger was held under $2500 bail for Court in New York in September, 1907, on the charge of forgery. After bail was obtained the defendant left the city. The wife and daughter of the man were under arrest at the time, it is said, on the charge of being implicated in the alleged forgery. The New York police say that the arrest of the family grew out of a real estate transaction in which Doellinger is said to have represented a rich widow. They assert that the attorney drew up a deed of the widow's property for $3500, and then substituted the name of his wife for that of his client. The daughter is said to have filed the deed.

DOELLINGER IN BRISTOL.

Henry A. Doellinger, or "William Stephen Bush," as he has been known in moving picture circles where he has posed as a lecturer, first made his appearance in Bristol in the fall of 1907, when he lectured at the Lyric moving picture hall over the store at the corner of Mill and Pond street, on the "Passion Play," or "Life of Christ." Since that time he has appeared here on numerous occasions and lectured on a variety of subjects.

On January 1st of this year, Harry Streeper engaged him, through the Electric Theatre Supply Co., 44 N. 10th street, Philadelphia, to manage the "Bristol" moving picture theatre, where he was employed with his son, Luther, the latter as operator, until his arrest in Philadelphia, last Saturday.

"Bush" was generally recognized by moving picture men as a good critic and he not only wrote comments on the pictures that were good and bad but wrote a number of lectures. He was the editor and publisher, about a year ago, of a paper called the "Exhibitor's Guide" and was the Philadelphia correspondent of the "Moving Picture World," the chief moving picture journal. He was a man of remarkable intelligence and was master of several languages.

A Splendid Entertainment.

On last Tuesday one of the finest entertainments, that has been witnessed in Bristol for a long time was given at the Baptist Church, under the direction of Frederick Morgan.

The entertainment consisted of selections by a chorus which evoked much applause. The chorus was composed of Mrs. E. Y. Rich, Miss Jennie Bunting, Mrs. A. L. Watt, Miss Adelaide Johnson, the Misses Argus, Wesley Bunting, James Guy, Harry Bunting, and Fred Morgan.

A delightful and artistic feature of the programme was the reading of James Whitcomb Riley's poems by Charles Finney, illustrated with living pictures. Harold Vandegrift aided Wesley Bunting by acting as an echo to Mr. Bunting's tenor solo.

The barytone solo of Charles Farronetti was such that the audience demanded an encore.

The entertainment was made doubly interesting by the rendering of a bright, sparkling skit, entitled "The Colloquy of Nations, or Liberty Seeking a Home." Miss Charlotte Betz made an excellent Goddess of Liberty, who sought all the Nations for a home and finally settled upon the United States. China was represented by Mrs. David; Russia by Miss Nellie Rea; France by Miss Adelaide Johnson; Scotland by Miss Florence Hendricks; Italy by Miss Jane Argus; Germany by Miss Nellie Watt; Ireland by Miss Sara Bailey; Spain by Miss Ray Vandegrift; India, by Miss Eliza Argus; America by Miss Minnie Vandegrift.

Other characters represented were: Printing, Miss Mattie Chambers; Mining, Mrs. Eva Donald; Education, Miss Lois Watt and Miss Edith Vandegrift; Justice, Miss Fabian, of Tullytown; Religion, Miss Bailey.

Liberty, thus surrounded by all nations pleading for her to take up her abode with them, she placed her crown upon the head of America, which act in the glow of red light made an inspiring and beautiful picture.

Everyone went away with words of praise on their lips for all who had taken part in the most interesting entertainment and especially for the managers who had spared no pains to make it such a success.

An April Fool Party.

An April fool party was given in honor of Miss Olive Jackson at her home, 440 Jefferson avenue, Bristol, last Friday evening. The evening was very pleasantly spent by those who were present. Refreshments were served. Those present were: Misses Helen Higgins, Ethel Wichser, Gertrude Phares, Katie Flannigan, Ethel Bevan; Messrs. Theodore Roper, Thomas Harrison, James Vannet, William Jackson, Ralph Snelson; also a number of Philadelphia relatives were present.

Religious Services at Langhorne.

Rev. Mrs. Mason, colored, advertised to be the "greatest woman preacher in the country" will hold religious services in Rosebone hall, Langhorne, on next Monday and Tuesday, April 11 and 12. Everybody is invited to attend and hear this great preacher.

Bristol to Have Good Ball Teams.

The Bristol Base Ball Club has been re-organized with the following officials: President, Frank Flum; manager and treasurer, Joseph B. Keating; secretary, William A. Gallagher.

The Simons field, adjoining the old grounds at Persimmon Park have been secured and the opening game of the season will be played on Sunday, April 24, according to present arrangements.

Practically the same team which represented Bristol last year will again be on the field this year including Barton, Mulligan, Ford, Kilmer, Costigan and Gaiser. Manager Keating is now negotiating for a fast short stop and may secure Si Perkins for first base.

The Bristol Bucks County League baseball team has reorganized for the season and John A. Mulholland has been elected manager. They will leave no stone unturned in their efforts to make their team a fast one. Bristol is a traveling team and they expect to have a team that will stay at the top of the league throughout the season. Manager Mulholland has signed a number of fast players, among them the best of last year's team.

The players signed are: Meehan, B. Praul, E. Praul, F. Praul, Lemaistre, E. O'Donnell, Hibbs, Appleton, McNichol, Mulholland, Britton, J. Mulligan, Clark, Thorne, C. Mulligan and P. O'Donnell.

Reception at Emilie.

A reception will be tendered the Rev. O. J. Randall and his wife at the Emilie Methodist Episcopal Church on Friday evening, the 8th instant, in honor of Mr. Randall's return to that church for the ninth year. The public generally is cordially invited.

The Regina PNEUMATIC CLEANER
"THE HOUSEKEEPER'S BEST FRIEND."

The Regina Pneumatic Cleaner, as its name indicates, is a machine for cleaning carpets, rugs, hardwood floors, curtains, draperies, walls and upholstered furniture by the vacuum process. It is simple but substantial in construction, and thoroughly practical and efficient in operation.

It is so easy to manipulate that the strength of a ten-year-old child is sufficient for the task. It removes every particle of dust and dirt, not only from the surface but also from the body of the fabric, and it does this without raising any dust. It thoroughly renovates carpets, rugs, curtains and upholstered furniture without the necessity of removing them from the house, and it does this so quickly, easily and well that to use it becomes a pleasure.

This cleaner weighs but 25 lbs. and is easily carried in one hand. It occupies small space when not in use and does the same work as other vacuum cleaners costing several times as much. It is 26 inches long, 12 inches wide and 13 inches high, not including the handle. All exposed metal parts are finished with enamel or are nickel plated, and the machine is mounted on a nicely-finished hardwood base. The hose is of a superior grade of rubber and is nine feet long, this having been found to be the most convenient length for all ordinary purposes.

PRICE, $25.00.
Will Rent Machine for $1 Per Day.

NOTHING WAS LOST.

An Omission in a Wedding Ceremony That Didn't Count.

A distinguished officer of the United States navy once told this story on himself:

At the time of his marriage he had been through the civil war and had had many harrowing experiences aboard ship, through all of which he kept courage and remained as calm as a brave man should. As the time for the ceremony came on, however, his calmness gradually gave way. At the altar, amid the blaze of brass buttons and gold lace marking the full naval wedding, the officer was all but stampeded, and what went on there seemed very much mixed to him. Fearing the excitement of the moment would temporarily take him off his feet, the officer had learned the marriage ceremony letter perfect, as he thought, and he remembered repeating the words after the minister in a mechanical sort of way.

After the ceremony was over and all was serene again, including the officer's state of mind, the kindly clergyman came up to him and touched him on the shoulder.

"Look here, old man," he said; "you didn't endow your wife with any worldly goods."

"What's that?" asked the bridegroom with something of astonishment in his voice.

"Why, I repeated the sentence 'With all my worldly goods I thee endow' several times, and despite my efforts you would not say it after me."

The bridegroom seemed perturbed for a moment, and then a beaming light came into his face.

"Never mind, sir," he said. "She didn't lose a blessed thing by my failure."—Exchange.

"Why do women insist on going to matinees for the sake of crying?" he inquired impatiently. "Haven't they enough trouble of their own?"

"I don't know," replied she. "Why do men insist on getting into a poker game for the sake of experiencing a new kind of financial worry?

Used the Wrong Gender.

A Frenchman with an imperfect knowledge of English was once called upon for an after dinner speech. He struggled along manfully for a few minutes, managing to turn one or two good phrases. Finally he excused himself from further effort by saying, "I will no longer cockroach on your time."

An Englishman sitting next to him at the table remarked: "Your speech was dooced clever, hah Jove! But you used the wrong word at the close, don't you know. You should have said 'I will no longer heucroach upon your time.'"

"I see," said the Frenchman. "I used the wrong geuder."—Exchange.

A Curious Stone.

A curious stone is the alexandrite. It is a dark green stone that is polished, cut and set very like a fine topaz or amethyst, in large showy rings surrounded by diamonds. By the light of day the alexandrite has no special beauty save its fine luster, but directly a shaft of artificial light strikes the dull stone deep glentns of red flash out of the green, and under the gas or in the firelight one ignorant of this vagary would instantly pronounce it a ruby.

Keeping Up Appearances.

Husband (suddenly waking up at dead of night)—What in the world was that noise? Wife (calmly)—It's all right, dear. The guests of the Moneybags' ball are just coming home, and I slipped down and gave our front door a slam, so the neighbors would think we were there.—New York Journal.

When Beau Nash and Wesley Met.

Beau Nash, though but an indifferent churchgoer, not only went to hear Whitefield preach, but attended a service at Bath held by John Wesley. The incident is related in Southey's "Life of Wesley:"

"While he was preaching this remarkable personage entered the room, came close to the preacher and demanded of him by what authority he was acting. Wesley made answer, 'By that of Jesus Christ, conveyed to me by the present archbishop of Canterbury, when he laid his hands upon me and said, "Take thou authority to preach the gospel."' Nash then affirmed that he was acting contrary to the laws. 'Besides,' said he, 'your preaching frightens people out of their wits.' 'Sir,' replied Wesley, 'did you ever hear me preach?' 'No,' said the master of ceremonies. 'How, then, can you judge of what you never heard?' Nash made answer, 'By common report.' 'Sir,' said Wesley, 'is not your name Nash? I dare not judge of you by common report. I think it not enough to judge by.'"

To Save You Time.

Have you ever noticed that when reading you waste a certain amount of time in turning from the end of one line to the beginning of the next? Long ago, when the world was not so busy as now, columns were of a much greater width. Since then they have been narrowed more and more.

Of course in an hour's reading little time is lost, but in a lifetime it is likely to be considerable. Realizing this, some one has suggested that type should be arranged as follows. You read to the end of the line, drop the eyes and read backward

Well Connected.

The Maple—What is the oak so conceited about? The Elm—He is the original oak under which Washington stopped in 1776. The Maple—But the souvenir fiends have left him only a blackened stump. The Elm—That's it. He has extensive branches in every city and town in the country.—Puck

CORN GROWERS.

Corn Growers are invited to take contracts to grow about one hundred acres in lots of ten acres. Details upon application.

SEED POTATOES.

MAINE GROWN.

Sacks containing 11 pecks weighing 165 lbs., not 10 peck sacks weighing 150 lbs., as sold by many others.

Direct from Aroostook county to Bloomsdale Farm, located on the river road about two miles above Bristol.

After the 15th of March about 1,000 sacks will be open for inspection. Come see them. Prices given on application.

No credit account opened with anybody for Potatoes under any circumstances.

Among the varieties are the following:

Early Ohio,	White Star,	Burbank's
Early Rose,	Crown Jewel,	Early Six Weeks,
Houlton Rose,	Beovee,	Beauty of Hebron,
Rural New Yorker,	White Bliss,	State of Maine,
Snowflake,	Sunlight,	Green Mountain,
Extra Early Vermont,	Carman,	Irish Cobblers.

As before stated, all these are of Maine growth and not to be compared with a cheaper, later and less hardy stock grown in the State of New York and elsewhere and too often sold as of Maine production.

MANHOOD

Address by the Rev. Guy L. Brown to Trustees, at the Men's Meeting.

On last Sunday afternoon Rev. Guy L. Brown, pastor of the Central Baptist Church, of Trenton, N. J., addressed the Men's Meeting at the Baptist Church. One hundred and eighty-one men were present.

Local selections were rendered by Mrs. Mitchell Ancker and Harry Bunting. Rev. Brown took for his subject "Manhood," and he delivered a highly interesting address, which was as follows:

REV. BROWN'S ADDRESS.

I congratulate you, gentlemen, on your beautiful little city, and on your preacher, Mr. Johnston. He is known very favorably among the people on the other side of the Delaware, for his work's sake; and I congratulate you on having such a wide awake helpful minister in your midst, and I congratulate Mr. Johnston on having such a splendid body of men to which to minister from week to week. I have in my ministry had the privilege of addressing various congregations of men, and I am free to acknowledge, I never in my experience have had the privilege of looking into the faces of a more intelligent, more manly appearing body than this, this afternoon; and I feel that my brother is to be congratulated on having such a splendid privilege from week to week.

I am happy to be here because I am a native of this state. I was born in Pennsylvania forty years ago, in the northwestern part of it. I lived there during the early part of my life, and received the major part of my training in this state. Pennsylvania is very dear to me and I am glad to come back again upon the old soil.

I have been announced to deliver an address which is a little out of my line. I am a preacher of the gospel. Your preacher has announced that he completes twenty years of his ministry; I completed twenty years of my ministry last month. For twenty years I have been trying to do the best I could, and at such points as the Lord provided, to preach the word of God, but to deliver an address always has been somewhat of an embarrassment to me. I always find myself in some predicament as this. In the country school house. He was unusually good at spelling, (in those old days when one had to take mark; some of you remember it). He had in question was always at the head of his class and had the highest marks of any lad in the school. It was a wonder to the rest of the scholars, how he could spell anything. He came along; until at last one of his competitors discovered, that when he reached a difficult word, his hand always flew to the button on his waistcoat, and while he fingered the button, he could spell anything. One day, at play, with a pair of scissors procured for the purpose, his companion nipped the button from his waist-coat, so of course when the spelling match was on they took from him. His competitors were seen at the class. At last a tall word came and the champion tackled it and spelled well for a period until he reached a difficult syllable then his finger went to the button, it had gone. In despair he fingered for it, he looked for it, it was gone, then he went up into the air, and his competitor took the coveted place. Now the point which I am trying to make is this: A minister's text is his button. If he has a text, he can walk around it, come back to it occasionally, feel it, at least can copy the time. Rob him of his text, and it is hard to tell what will happen. Now I am asked to make an address. I have not been granted a text, but I have a splendid text before me, perhaps no better rallying point could be offered, than the face of these young men who are Christians, I assume men who are anxious to be right men in any rate. If you will allow me I will take you this afternoon, as a starting point, I shall at least attempt to occupy the time allowed for this exercises. I would like to talk about the elements of manly character or a little thing of that sort. You may have the address whatever you please, but with you in my mind, I shall speak of manhood.

It is better to be a man than to be a hero. There are few exigencies that offer opportunities for men to be crown them as heroes. For instance there was one emergency, one opportunity to enter Manila Bay and admiral Dewey chanced to be there at that point and went in and was crowned a hero. I think it would be doing injustice to American manhood, to say that there were not plenty of men all around us who might, if they had been in the same position, have entered that port and been crowned in Dewey's place. He chanced to be the man at the time and entered and was crowned. There are only a few exigencies in life that make what we call heroes, but there is always the chance to be a man, and after all that is the highest and noblest thing within the attainment of every individual in this audience, this afternoon.

When Goff, the great temperance lecturer, and great man, visited Europe with his wife, they were up among the Alps and John Goff, speaking of it, the guide suggested that if opportunity presented itself, he, Goff, would be delighted to see the sun rise above the clouds; and on a morning when the story was on the guide aroused the sleepers and said: "Mr. Goff, if you are anxious to see the sun rise above the clouds, come with me now." Mr. Goff arose hurriedly, his wife likewise, and they went out into the early morning and followed the guide as he led up the rugged path until they reached the point where the guide said: "Watch." In a moment, those who have been in the hills will appreciate it, in a flash the great sun lifted its head out of the eastern horizon and sent his panels of gold down into the clouds beneath them painting the rolling mass into the beauty of a mother of pearl. Enraptured with the sight, Goff turned to his wife and said: "O, my dear, can there any thing in this world, be more beautiful than this?"

The little woman looked up into her husband's face and said, "Yes, John, to be a man."

She knew the contrast, she knew her husband when he was not a man, when he was a mere animal moved by passion, when he followed the inclination of the beastly passion to do wrong, then she knew the same individual when he stood in the strength and the glory of that character. To be a man is better than all this. She was right.

Now, my Christian brothers, I must understand this afternoon that an individual is not a man who is granted a franchise. An individual is not a man who simply ups the scale at so many pounds. A man may be able to weigh 150 pounds avoirdupois and still be far less than the genuine interpretation of the term.

What are the elements in character that produce man? I dare say I agree with the sentiment of all here when I declare, in order to produce the highest character, there must be a high ideal before the life. With less than a true ideal, character drops short of this end. We may never be able to reach our ideal. We may be and are less than our ideals; I dare say we will always be so, but there is no argument in that against ideals. The ideal which leads us on is that which distinguishes us, other things being equally right.

Perhaps I had better refer to a concrete example of what I am trying to reach. In a little village in the state, the one in which my home was located, there were three brothers, sons of the same father and mother, surrounded by the same environments in life.

Two of the boys, the older, made a shipwreck of life in a most lamentable way and hopeless fashion.
